

NRA cut a deal with the left!

by Erick Erickson

Two weeks ago, the NRA cut a deal with the left in its ongoing attempt to silence the right. The NRA would get exempted from the DISCLOSE Act — legislation designed to silence issue advocacy groups. Not even darlings of the left like Planned Parenthood got what the NRA got.

Last week, I reported much to the NRA's protestations, that it had issued a 'gag order' to its board. To be clear, the NRA said it told its board members they could not testify on the NRA's behalf at the Elena Kagan hearings. But the effect is the same as a gag order. 'Issues advocacy' testimony is sent to individuals on behalf of groups. When Senators reached the second amendment discussion in the Kagan hearings, not one person affiliated with the nation's premier second amendment advocacy group was there to speak.

Now the NRA is laying the groundwork to endorse Harry Reid in Nevada.

The NRA is not exactly denying it, instead saying they are not issuing general election endorsements now. But, the NRA's chief lobbyist is already starting to justify the NRA's support of Harry Reid. The National Rifle Association is a great member services organization. In the fight for freedom, however, they need to man up and fight.

Wayne LaPierre, NRA CEO sells out the NRA membership for one lousey shooting range in Nevada. Was it worth it, you traitor?

Dump them both!
